TAX LAW HITS MUNICIPALITIES

Councils May Request Special Session of House

Special sessions of the House of Commons are being called to deal with the tax law which has been passed by the federal government. The law will increase the tax on municipal property and will also increase the tax on the income of municipalities.

The law is expected to be passed in the next few days. It will have a significant impact on the finances of municipalities across the country. Many municipalities are expected to request special sessions of their local councils to discuss the impact of the law.

The law is a result of the federal government's efforts to increase its revenue. It is a controversial measure that has caused much concern among municipalities. Many municipalities are expected to request special sessions of their local councils to discuss the impact of the law.
