Threatening Problem Arises in Life of Bridal Couple

SUN OFFERS $50 FOR BEST ANSWERS

Don is just furious with me, and I—well, I don't know whether I'm terribly sorry, or just heart-broken.

I had no idea he would feel the way he did, and I was feeling blue at the thought of our separation, even for three days, when I broke the news.

"Darling," I said, "how do you think you could get along without me for three whole days?"

Don just laughed. "You're still worrying about my taking the trip to Mayfield, forget it," he said, and his face was flushed, and someone else.

"That is something different." I told him, deciding it was best to break the news in case. "How if my boss has an important conference in Chicago, and says he'll need his own secretary so I'm to go, too?"

"What? Don dropped his paper. "Do you think I stand for my wife leaving me in a foreign country with another man? I never heard of such a thing. You'll not get away with it. Of course, I will, silly." Don can make me angry quicker than he can make me smile, and he had to make my decision for me. "I've gone on trips with him before—there's nothing wrong with that. I think it's a perfect gentleman, and I'd love to have more respect for your own wife, at least, than to even enter there might be something wrong with it.

"This is business, Don. Why A. L. Crosby is one of the biggest business men in the country. He never—why, the idea that I'm a woman probably has never entered his head. I'm just a secretary, like a factory, or a bank.

"Oh, yeah? Don can be terribly sarcastic sometimes. I suppose he thought you were a filing cabinet when he shipped you fifty dollars for a wedding present.

"Don't tell me, baby, it's these big business men that always fall for their secretaries. Don't you ever need

"Don't kid me, baby, it's these business men that always fall for their secretaries."

Rules of Conduct Questioned

What Authority Should Husband Have Over His Wife?

How much authority should a husband have over his wife? What right does he have to order her rules of conduct?

Nancy, the secretary to a big business executive, and he expects her to accompany him to Chicago on a business trip. There's nothing unusual about it—Nancy's way of thinking. She has taken such trips before. They have always been perfectly proper.

"Why, I'm not a piece of furniture to him, like anything else in the office," she says, angry that Don, her brand-new husband, should be so suspicious. Perhaps that's why she decided to go, no matter what Don says, and she was angry and hurt that her husband should have any right, she is sure, to her.

Nancy describes the problems that she finds in adjusting herself to this kind of life. It is the kind of life which is published in the Vancouver Sun every Sunday. She doesn't know. And there are hundreds of other young married couples who are faced with the same sort of problems. They are wondering what to do, too.

"That's why The Vancouver Sun is offering prizes of $50 for the best answer to these problems.

ARCTIC FORCES BACK AVIATORS

WINNIPEG, Aug. 30.—Heaten by the North's uncertain weather, W. E. O'Brien, pilot of the P. 10, famous Arctic explorer, and his pilot, W. E. O'Brien, will return to civilization without having reached King William's Land, where back in 1874-84 Sir John Franklin and his party of 193 men perished.

Delay in receiving the gasoline supply for their giant airplane has kept O'Brien and O'Brien waiting at Port Hearne, far-north outpost, for more than a week, and now they are almost certain not to risk the air journey into the treacherous King William area.

"They must come out within the next few days," said W. T. Brimble, managing director of Western Canada Airways, here today.
