EXCITED CROWD GASPS AT LOOPS

the difference between transportation of yesteryear in British Columbia and that of today.

Emphasis was laid on his speech by the flying which followed.

By noon more than ten thousand people had gathered in the grandstands, in the enclosure and on the airport grounds.

The talk was all of flying, and of its value to the city. Skeptics were silenced.

The roar of engines warming up, machines in the air, a preliminary taste of what was to come, held the crowd spell-bound.

A long stream of cars, snaking an idle way to the airport hour after hour, showed the interest being taken in the first day of the official ceremony.

Then, like a challenge to any doubters, the first pilots "went upstairs," and modern machines, of all engine calibres, showed what modern men, trained to a hair, could do.

There had been a rat-chase formation flight. I discovered Vancouver.

REALISTIC AIR BATTLE

I flew with Pilot H. O. Madden as we took off nose to tail on a flight over the city. It lay swimming in a green pool of tree-lined avenues, its environs intersected by straight streets. Have you seen your city from the air? It is a thing to wonder at. Its beauty beggars description.

The buildings, the inlet, the mountains of the north shore, bony-headed Baker Mountain in the distance, the toy ships that swing at anchor, the stunted things called men stifling in streets when the great lanes of the air are available, are all a revelation you will see now, if the airport authorities give you the opportunity of doing so—to make you a booster for Vancouver's airport.

We returned to a crowd of thousands hungry for thrills. They came in plenty.

Les Bowman, from Los Angeles was scheduled to stunt.

There was something uncanny about the control of that machine. It rolled, looped, until your hair stood on end, when Johnnie Blum of Seattle took off to meet him in a dog-fight, to show what the modern machine can do in battle. Immelmanned and outwitted, fighting every inch of the way, in a manner that brought the crowd to its feet, yelling excitedly. Two men, two machines, locked in combat, made many an old pilot on the airdrome wonder what flying was coming to.

JUST "AIR CRAZY"

It was the formation flying by the Royal Canadian Air Force Siskin the crowd was waiting for. There is an enviable record of great deeds, Flight-Lieut. Riddell, in a Siskin, gave them a foretaste. If you were asked confidentially your opinion of him, you would reply without prejudice that he's crazy. He looked ached with applause. He is a discontented flier. There are not enough manoeuvres for him. He took off in a climbing turn, such as makes a pilot on the ground watching, pray for the evenness of the engine. He got height. He dived down. At a criminally low height from the ground he looped. (God send that engine holds!)

The crowd went mad with excitement.

He flung the Siskin—there's few better machines—into a half roll. He was upside down. He held it until the crowd begged for breath.

He was away again, getting height, only to drop into a spin so tight that it was difficult to count the number of times he turned on his own axis.

He banded and the crowd drew breath.

One hair-raising exhibition followed another, the crowd gasping for breath. Then the motor cars were driving to the airport to swell the size of the crowd.

HAIR-RAISING ANTICS

What are you to do about a man whose feel, whose sense of a plane is such, that he can take an aerial flyer off the ground, though it is but a twin-engined, 35 h.p. bus, and with agility that looks like madness, reduce the bus by crazy flying to a wild, uncontrolled, berserk thing? Captain Martin did it. The crowd sweated freely. There's no other description possible. They sweated.

That inquiring-looking, but tremendously stable light plane came to life under his hands. He gave it rudder and made it perform hair-raising antics a foot or two above the ground, while the crowd shrieked their approbation. He alighted the plane, an Aeronca, until men and women and children were so agitated they wondered what the end would be.

Sanity came with the placid, even, drill-like movements of a flight from a United States bombardment squadron, which, as though at the word of command from the ground performed formation movements. Their orange and blue machines preserved the angle of balance. They gave the crowd poise with their controlled, deliberate manoeuvres.

Thrill after thrill! George Bennett, parachute jumper, leaped from 1079 feet to a crowd that roared at him.

HEAD STRAIGHT FOR STAND

But we had waited, through tense hours, for the Siskin flight. Their moment came. A slim, diaphonous moon was already rising, to court the blazing sun. Full into his pallid face the Siskins took off, with a murderous roar of heavy horse-powered engines. Climbing against time they made height. Every moment was filled with dramatic significance, a background of deafening noise heightening the impression.

The three machines, looking as though they were wing on wing, kept high above our heads. Suddenly the scream of bracing wires hit us as a blow on our ear-drums. In a power dive, engines revving full out, the three silvered, massive bearers of death, were headed straight for the grandstand.

Then, a pull at the stick, a change of note in the song of the bracing wire, and the three machines, wing to wing, without loss of formation, were looping slowly above us in a wide arc.

In line astern they manoeuvred. They rolled. They dived. They looped, and on top of the loop swung into that greatest of all war manoeuvres, the Immelman turn. They dived on the sheds and, before they opened fire, would have whipped the innards out of the ground organization. They straightened out in a burst of speed they tore up the straight like so many aerial racehorses. Never once did they lose any formation. From line astern they built up once again to V—duck—formation.

"LAID ITS EGGS"

Life looked easy. A sudden change, and three machines demonstrated how an airdrome can be bombed. Converging bombing was ordered by the formation leader. Three machines changed direction. Three machines, each imbued with the simplicity of the same order, dived on the airdrome. Each machine, supposed to be loaded with bombs like an angry bee with sting, took its own course. It swung from its fellow so as not to interfere with its operation, or catch the blast of uprising air that follows low diving, dove on the mark, and having "laid its eggs," zoomed up and away, to return at once with the second load.

Time after time, with rhythmic persistency, in gigantic, flowing Prince of Wales' feathers movements, three pilots displayed the effectiveness of modern aircraft in warfare.

No crowd could have been left with even one cheer.

The crowd sheered; but the cheers were for the day; Vancouver's airport had been opened with everything that is magnificent in modern flying.

It would be wonderful to be a child and see Vancouver's airport in many years' time.

Cuticura Healed Large, Hard Pimples Scattered Over Face.

"I had pimples and blackheads scattered all over my face. The pimples were large, hard and red, would hurt a few days and then go away. My face usually was very itchy before a pimple formed. This went on for about one and a half years.

"I saw Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertised so sent for a free sample of each. I used them and then purchased a box of the Ointment and a cake of the Soap and in about two or three weeks I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Kathyrna T. Dobka, Otthon, Sask., Sept. 11, 1930.

Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Sold everywhere. Sample each free. Address Canadian Depot: J. T. Wah Company Limited, Montreal.

AUTOGIRO IS NEW THRILLER

Slow Motion, Not Speed, Features 'Funniest' Plane

By "JOYSTICK"

The British Consols Autogiro is the funniest looking thing that was ever called an airplane, but, to my mind, is about the safest plane that ever took to the air.

It's stunted, fixed wings makes even an experienced pilot wonder how it could ever get purchase enough on the air to keep it in flight. The secret is the funny "windmill" rotor of four blades which act as a supporting surface and give it enormously increased stability.

I had the privilege of a "flip" in it with Capt. Godfrey Dean, its pilot. I was looking for some extra thrill in flying which I had never known before.

I got one. Not when I was flying "all out"—the sensation then was the same as in an ordinary plane—but when the engine was throttled down. It just seemed to hover in the air like a huge gnat, coming across the sky at a speed that seemed, from 1000 feet, to be scarcely 20 miles an hour. The engine was just ticking over at a few hundred revs, but the "windmill" kept right on floating around keeping the machine jogging along.

When coming down to land the machine seemed to have little or no forward speed, settling down slowly and squatting on the ground, just like a crow landing.

It is a sensation that must be experienced to be realized.

KITSILANO RESCUE RECOGNITION SOUGHT

Official recognition of the conduct of George Burrows, Kitsilano bathhouse manager, who saved Norman Robertson, 20, from drowning early Saturday morning, will be sought from the Royal Canadian Humane Society.

H. H. Duggan, of Vancouver city police, secretary of the Vancouver branch, Royal Life Saving Society and local representative of the Royal Canadian Humane Society, has secured names and addresses of three eye-witnesses of the rescue.

The statements, supported by a letter sent to The Vancouver Sun by Dr. O. Dahuth, will be forwarded to the society at Hamilton, Ont., Mr. Duggan stated today.

George Burrows was trained in life saving by the local society and, for proficiency, was awarded the Royal Life Saving Society's bronze medal.

Siskin Fighters Prove Thrilling Pageant Feature

"America went mad about this Siskin flight at the National Air Races, Cleveland, Ohio, 1929," declared the radio announcer, describing the wonderful work of these fliers at the opening of the new airport yesterday.

"Newspapers ran headlines such as 'Canadian pilots outfly American Fliers'."

The Siskin flights was a hair-raising thrill yesterday. Saturday they will perform stunts even more wonderful. Are you interested in Vancouver's greatest bid for transport supremacy? See the Siskins again on Saturday.

Portland Mayor Sends Greetings

Felicitations upon the opening of Vancouver's airport were received by Mayor L. D. Taylor yesterday from the city of Portland.

Mayor George L. Baker, who led the recent tour of France by 40 United States mayors, sent his city's greetings by air. They were conveyed by Allan A. Byron, member of the Oregon State Legislature, in his Stinson Detroiter. Mr. Byron also brought a party of friends, including Earl Brocaugh Jr., also a State legislator.

Practical hospitality was extended by the Portland visitors when they took Ald. Walter Deptford for his first aerial spin. Ald. F. C. Gibbens and Fire Chief C. W. Thompson accompanied him aloft.
