Truck Load of Beer Vanishes; Agent Loses Much Sleep

NEW WESTMINSTER, Nov. 19.—Fass the aspirins to Russell Stallard, Chilliwack truck line agent!

For Mr. Stallard is suffering from a severe headache caused by a sleepless night worrying over the disappearance of one of his two-ton trucks loaded with 20 kegs of beer.

The beer truck checked out from the Westminister Brewery at 5 p.m. Monday en route to Chilliwack.

Early Tuesday morning Mr. Stallard frantically phoned the Provincial Police that the truck had failed to arrive and "has not been seen or heard of" since it left the brewery.

All Provincial Police sub-offices and New Westminister police were notified.

The truck and beer finally passed through the Estfallo Bridge late Tuesday.

The driver, Albert Yena, had apparently failed to report that after leaving the brewery he had run the truck into a garage for repairs.

The beer was found intact. The beer is still reported missing on the New Westminister City Police blotter. There is no official report to the contrary.
