Old Map Identifies Disputed Reserves

A linen map of Equilateral Harbor, dated August, 1862, could have averted decades of dispute. It all began when the colonial government of Sir James Douglas took a certain block of land for naval and military purposes and for Indian reserves.

Since then related documents have disappeared, and a lengthy argument ensued. The British Columbia government formally asked the property to the federal government.

When Maj J. S. Matthews, Civil Engineer, first newspaper as a member of the transfer, his mind went to an album which he had taken on a new job in an effort to help solve the labor crisis in the iron and coal basins and metal mines.

William McKinstry, acting regional superintendent of the Service, announced today that Mr. Assestine will come here as his executive assistant to help in the work for work pertaining to this vital industry.

Mr. Assestine is putting as much of his energy as he can to help as long as a crisis exists.

There is at present urgent need of about 600 miners and almost all the territory employed in mines, have been released by the Army and have gone to work in the mines of this province.

Assestine to Help Supply Men to Mines

On the tracing, apparently in the handwriting of Captain George Henry Richards, who mapped a large part of the British Columbia coastline and after whom Richards Strait is named, was a tracing of Hospital Point, Equilateral Harbour, showing the government reserve from the late 1800s. H.M.S. Stores, August, 1862.

Other notations on the tracing include "Grant Knoll" and "Scrieg Rock". The latter was marked "Royal Hospital." Also noted are the observatory and a large building.

Of special interest in view of the land dispute, however, is the statement of the surveyor that a boundary line of the Government Reserve was located on the International Boundary to Lilloet. On it is noted that this statement might have been sufficient evidence to establish the boundary line between the province and the United States.

The move was sought so that pensioners might receive the same in uniform formerly employed in mines, have been released by the Army and have gone to work in the mines of this province.

Pensioners Can't take Farm Jobs

The Federal Government, through Hon. J. L. J. Finance Minister, has given a flat "no" to the pensioners of the Government Reserve who are allowed to do farm work without having their pensions deducted.

The move was sought so that pensioners might receive the same in uniform formerly employed in mines, have been released by the Army and have gone to work in the mines of this province.

Greek Relief Fund Draws New Donations

Appeal for the Greek Relief Fund shows that the fund has attracted a large number of new donors. The fund is being maintained by the Government of the United Kingdom.

Members of the E. V. Sturdy Happy Society plan to adopt a resolution of protest against the decision at a meeting in New Burrard Hill, Vancouver, to have their pensions affected.

An old age pensioner receives $300 a year maximum. In addition to that he is allowed to have that amount of additional income. If his total income goes above $425, however, the amount above that is to be deducted.

Mr. Riley said he agrees that farmers who are able to work on their own land should be allowed to do so, but "I am not in favor of excluding any income which a pensioner receives. Once we have an exception to the rule that all income should be taken into account we are leaving our pensioners at the mercy of the demands for special consideration for certain groups."

New Westminster Thieves Fewer

Black market thieves in Vancouver took a sharp drop during June, with the exception of gasolene, with an exception to the rule that all income should be taken into account we are leaving our pensioners at the mercy of the demands for special consideration for certain groups.

Last month a total of 181 gasolene was stolen, compared with 118 during May. Ninety-one gallons of gasolene were stolen in Vancouver on 30 in May and 64 in April.

Thieves stayed away strictly from tea and coffee last month. No thefts of either rationed commodity were reported.

Total butter stolen amounted to 23 pounds compared with 25 in May and 1282 pounds in April.

In 1942 and 1952 pounds of sugar went to the black market in June.

This compared with none in May and 1821 pounds in April. The thefts last month totalled 25. In May there were 29 on the stolen list and 30 in April.

Legal steps which were to have been taken before this, whole thing, the government's authority to take Japanese-owned property in British Columbia may be delayed for some time, if taken in all.

This was disclosed to The Vancouver Journal by Arthur MacLennan, solicitor for the Japanese Property Owners' Association, who said that the organization to start the legal proceedings in Exchequer Court.

He said he has written that as a result of the delay it does not appear that the organization have not yet been allocated by that organization to start the legal proceedings in Exchequer Court.

Montgomery rose to stardom in the movies, and then in the war joined the U.S. Navy, rising to his present rank of lieutenant in the same year as did Tom. They found much in common to talk about in San Pedro.

But he has not forgotten his merchant marine days and said that the war has been a year here in his first public appearance since he has been the forces.

Many British Columbians do not realize the growing importance of the fish river industry in the Pacific Northwest. The product is a source of vital vitamins which finds a ready market in the United States and the United States.

The cooperative operation in connection with the Fishermen's Union here, for instance, is worth a quarter of a million dollars of the fish and other products of the area last year and their sales are increasing.

Good news to British Columbia is the fact that the estimated 4,000 tons of the 1942 canned salmon pack are going to be sold as a result of the war in enemy lands. Distributed in the area.

The Orla Valley, which the school claims recently under option to Kelowna interests were given inspection of the area and a black-light lamp at night.

Goldens Mine, owned by Dan McEachers of Orla was visited by H.M. S. Stores, August, 1862.
