SCHOOL ISSUE

Board Votes For Probe Of Probers

Vancouver school board voted Monday to probe the problems of police interrogations in schools.

A special committee of trustees will meet principals, police and any interested groups to examine all aspects and implications of the question.

Trustees took the recommendation of assistant schools superintendent Howard J. Kenzie on the issue, raised by trustee James MacFarlan at the previous meeting.

MacFarlan urged that those who are prevented from entering schools to question students suspected of crimes.

The resolution was altered to include his suggestion that the special committee should include, in addition to police and principals, any groups or persons with which it wishes to discuss the issue.
